

Marvelous Designer 6 Personal 2.5.96.23433.x64 (1DVD).Cypress Collateral Cypress Collateral is the first solo album by American rock musician Gregg Allman. It was produced by Bob Krasnow and features several of Allman's southern friends. It was the first album from his newer musical direction, a shift from the band Laid Back to a more abrasive style of rock, sampling and one-person-band-playing. The songs present a more Southern-inspired feel, with slower tempos and short guitar solos. As with his previous solo albums (A Trick Of The Trade and The Loner), Allman's production style was not as clean as his live performances, but rather of a more raw, hard-to-control, and experimental nature. Another notable aspect of this record is that it contains samples from a piece of experimental music called "The Cybernetic Stimulation of Man's Higher Intelligence" by Robert Moog and the audio horn section of the Swedish progressive rock band The Flower Kings.
