Q: Don't do anything if file has been removed My idea is to get all files from a folder (and subfolders) with PHP and store the info (like username of user) inside a new file in the same folder. The files may be removed by the user, or by a script/cronjob. So, what I want to achieve is to make a check if the file is there. If not, echo a warning/error message. I already found a piece of code that I think does exactly what I want, but I still have a question about it. The code is here: `' ; } else { echo '`
