Q: Defining a new species based on a previously defined one with the same genus The current organism on earth (but only on Earth) is Isotoma petraeum, which is a member of the genus Isotoma, which is a member of the family, Crambidae, which is a member of the order Lepidoptera (but only on Earth). My question: What do we call the new organism if the genus, Isotoma, is changed to what is below, but the order, Lepidoptera, and the family, Crambidae, remain the same? Current genus: Isotoma Current order: Lepidoptera Current family: Crambidae Question: What do we
