AutoCAD is the preferred platform for programming and adding functionality to 3D models. AutoCAD Architecture AutoCAD Architecture uses the same basic functionality as AutoCAD. AutoCAD Architecture includes components that can be used in AutoCAD for drafting, furniture, management, modelling, and analytics. They can be accessed from the Application Services menu. AutoCAD Architecture adds capabilities to AutoCAD that are not found in other types of AutoCAD software and provides architectural tools for creating projects. AutoCAD Architecture has two areas of focus: 2D: tools for creating architectural drawings, such as 2D and 3D block, sectioning, and dimension tools. 3D: tools for creating more advanced models and projects, including modeling, 2D drafting, and project management. The products are listed below and the interfaces are accessible from the Application Services menu. Modelling 3D modelling: Revit modelling can be done through plugins. Revit MEP (Multi-family environments): MEP Modeling is designed specifically for multifamily and commercial environments. The main purpose is to generate building designs and building documents. Workflow Automatic link between the architectural model and the building's 3D documentation. Design rendering in real time through the Internet and Web applications. Creation of other documents such as drawings, floor plans, and cost estimate. Furniture Furniture: Quick furniture definition. Allows the user to add and edit furniture. Furniture statistics and models Furniture Overlay Tools Walls: Allows the user to add, edit, and delete walls and doors. Walls statistics and models Sections Sectioning: Allows the user to create sections, furniture, and complex objects. Sections statistics and models Drafting 2D drafting: Allows the user to add and edit 2D blocks, sections, and dimensions. 2D drafting statistics and models 3D drafting: Allows the user to create 3D blocks, sections, and dimensions. 3D drafting statistics and models Quality Adds the ability to save the design as a PDF document. Data

Management Refills the database and allows you to select the list of projects that will be updated. Allows the user to control the registration and changes on the record of the database. Allows the user to export the database as a format of choice. ca3bf1094
