The Export tool allows you to save your image into a new file format. You can create.JPG or.PNG format images. Photoshop will create a high-quality version that looks the best. While it's possible to save to JPEG or PNG, it is generally not worth it. First, JPEG creates smaller file sizes, and PNG creates better quality files. Methodists' charitable fund, the Moravian Hospital, Belfast, was established in 1828 to provide palliative care to the people of Belfast and in many cases replace the primitive then-existing hospitals. From the beginning it received £1,000 per year from the Moravian Society and £500 per year from the "Colonial Income" fund, providing the first year's £1,000 to be devoted solely to providing good palliative care. In the latter case £200 was set aside for secular, scientific purposes. This money was principally but by no means entirely used for the Moravian Hospital. The Colonial Incomes were used mainly for the Moravian Society's work in areas not covered by the Moravian Hospital or other charitably-funded services. In 1856 the sum was increased to £2,000 per year. By the time of the invasion of Ireland in the early years of the 20th century it had by then expanded to £5,000 per annum. The sum for the invasion was raised by £5,000 in Belfast and £9,000 in Dublin. The Moravian Hospital in Ulster, today, is the largest hospital in Northern Ireland, but among its services is a ward for those with (non-cancer) dementia and Alzheimer's disease. Then, in the late 19th century, Bernard Cauchy, a leading chemical scientist, left his native France for Belfast, where he took an active role in setting up the Albert College. In 1895 he helped establish a new Moravian Hospital on the Killough estate in west Belfast, later renamed, after his name, the Cauchy Hospital. It then evolved into the largest Moravian Hospital in the world, covering over 14 hectares of land in east Belfast. In terms of beds, it has the second-largest, after the National Maternity Hospital. At this time the hospital was still called the Moravian Hospital and was given a special status in the British public finances as an "emergency hospital", which meant it received annual funding at a rate of £7,000 per year. In the 1930s the National Health Service took over funding; it does not have the special status of an emergency hospital. During the Northern Ireland civil-rights struggle, in 1968, the hospital was "invaded" by protestors and under siege for three weeks (including during the "Bloody Sunday" riots), a courageous act of civil disobedience by the Moravian Church and its Chaplain, Rev
