9* Military Decision (turn based): The game is turn based. Played over 17 turns, each turn represents a day. Needs cleaning up a bit. The bottom text is super huge in the first turn. Additionally, units that are removed from the map are removed from the game when in retreat, even though they are still in combat. This causes a huge pile of removed units that need to be in the game to be removed. I started running a farm with the following demographics: The Javanese have a much higher birth rate than their neighbors, and their population is staying at bay. So far, they are not attacking. The Indians have a small population, and nothing is happening there. The peace to be had will be that the Malaysians will be surrounded by hostile forces. The British counteroffensive has begun on the second turn and the Malaysians are fleeing. In the 4th turn, the British begin to move from Kuala Lumpur to Singapore. General: No promises. Singapore is gone, and it has been a long time since I've been able to create and run a new game from scratch. And I have been busy with real life since the last game. About This ContentMalaya 1941 covers the December 1941 invasion of the Malay peninsula and the air and naval campaigns around it. The Japanese forces must capture Singapore and their offensive could be well stopped by the mighty 'Prince of Wales' battleship. The British have to repulse the offensive or hold as long as they can.Malaya 1941 lasts 17 turns, each representing on average 4 days, between the 8th December 1941 and the 15th February, 1942. It opposes the British and the Japanese over the Malay peninsula.- The Japanese have 3 powerful veteran divisions and a strong air force, but their navy is puny. - The British are on the defensive, with troops of dubious and varied quality. But their fleet, with 'HMS Prince of Wales' and possibly 'HMS Hermes' could make a difference.The game event cards allow full replay ability thanks to the numerous various situations that they create on the diplomatic, military, political or economical fields.Estimated Playtime: 2h00Favored Side: BritishHardest to Play: British. ## What's new:

-1942 Malaya 1941-42 was the last and largest phase of the Malaya Campaign of the Second World War, fought by the British Army and Commonwealth forces during World War II. After the victories at Hong Kong and Singapore, fighting in Malaya ceased on 15 September 1941. In accordance with the terms of the surrender of the Japanese, then British commander in Malaya Lieutenant-General Arthur Percival handed over to the Japanese Army. The general situation of the war in Malaya was decided by the Japanese military command in July 1941, but the original intent of the plan was for the Japanese to take Singapore, and then head east towards Burma. The plan was partially changed in August 1941 when Attlee ordered the British commander Arthur Percival and the Malayan Civil Affairs Office to concentrate on delaying the invasion. The Japanese failed to complete the invasion as scheduled in September 1941, and they moved north to begin the siege of Singapore, which lasted from February 1942 until the end of the war in 1945. Singapore was besieged by land, air and sea and under continual bombardment by the Japanese Armed Forces. The city was defended by a mainly-British force (exceeding 85,000 men) comprising the Malay States Volunteer Force, the Indian Corps, the 31st British Infantry Brigade, the Indian 34th Infantry Brigade, and the MAF (Malaya Anti-Fascist People's Resistance Forces). At the same time, the number of soldiers from other British territories in the Far East, such as from Australia, Canada, New Zealand, and South Africa was also increasing. Despite the devastation imposed upon the British in the East Indies by the Imperial Japanese Navy's growing presence and growing war against Britain, allied forces in China and Malaya, and the United States' commitment of "seventy-five [first] squadrons" of the United States Army Air Forces, were also contributing the war. The overall effort to fight Japan by the British forces was assisted from
