Allelopathic interaction between a biopurified phenolic extract from Phaseolus vulgaris and Silybum marianum affects their seed germination and seedling growth. Seeds of Phaseolus vulgaris and Silybum marianum are two important competitors for water and nutrients in the Mediterranean Basin. A new biopurified extract of P. vulgaris seeds inhibited both seed germination and seedling growth of S. marianum, but not of Brassica napus. Its effect on germination was related to its phenolic content, and maximum inhibition occurred when the extract was added during the initial stages of seed germination. Its action on seedling development was more complex, inhibiting growth at the early stages, while also reducing the root/shoot ratio. Besides, this extract inhibited lateral root formation in P. vulgaris seedlings. The federal authorities arrested a couple of days ago Nidal Nahem Nassry, a resident of Balochistan's Nushki area, the Saudi Agency of Gulf News reported. According to Saudi News Agency, Saudi officials said that Nahem Nassry has confessed to being part of a jihadist group. He confessed of kidnapping three Shi'ites - Ibrahim Al-Eskander, Arafat Al-Baskani and Mohammad Al-Jassim. These three men were kidnapped from the capital of "Indian Province" of Saudi Arabia, Riyadh, about 10 days ago. This official said that Nassry confessed that these three men were kidnapped in Saudi Arabia and that they have since been in the hands of his group. Saudi nationals who oppose the Hijazi administration have kidnapped the men in order to take revenge on them. According to investigators, Hassan Al-Nassery's men kidnapped the three men after getting to know that they were Shi Occ13bf012
