

FIFA 20 sold 14 million physical and digital units in its first month of availability. The game's peak concurrent player count, recorded by EA in May, was more than 500 million. In addition, the game had massive global impact on EA Sports titles. FIFA 21 saw a 65 percent surge in sales growth to reach a new peak of 73 million units sold. The commercial effect on FIFA proved significant as well, with EA Sports games revenues for the quarter increased by $33 million, driven by higher sales for FIFA and Madden NFL 21. "The FIFA community is one of the biggest and most devoted in the world, and we're always striving to deliver gameplay that is the closest we can get to the competition. FIFA 20 set a new benchmark, both for gameplay and commercial success, and we are looking forward to seeing what FIFA 22 can deliver," said Aaron McHardy, vice president and executive producer on the EA SPORTS FIFA franchise. EA SPORTS FIFA 20s "Instant FM" feature is highly regarded by the most hardcore and competitive players. It allows fans to see all the essentials of the game like lineup, formation, stadium, coin toss, referral system, plus important info on the two teams. FIFA 21 offers more improvements for the passing and shooting. In addition, the defensive and offensive chemistry is a step up, as is the pace and rhythm of the game. FIFA Online and the PES franchise are also being updated to maximize the social experience for the modern player. FIFA 22 The upcoming EA SPORTS FIFA 22 game will be available for the first time on PlayStation 4, Xbox One and PC in early November. Introduced in FIFA 20, "HyperMotion Technology" was developed specifically for the PS4 platform. The goal is to create even more precise on-the-pitch action and to reflect the essence of real-world football. The engine's motion capture technology allows for highly detailed and lifelike motion capture animation. It enables players to mimic the motions, expressions, and style of unique real-life athletes and position players to give them superior control during play. The new camera angles, player collision, and animations allow for smoother, less-stiff player mechanics and the ability to customize your player traits and styles to the realism you want. The demo for FIFA 22 is coming in late 2018. Look for new

FIFA gives you the chance to play and manage your very own football club - or become one of the stars on the pitch. The most authentic football action you've ever experienced comes alive in stunning details, from the shadows and grime of the training ground, to the thrill of goal-scoring opportunities and the emotion of the live crowd. FIFA is one of the most popular sports games, and for good reason. The year is now 2019. It's been 3 years since FIFA 18 and EA Sports FUT has been out for quite sometime and I still haven't gotten round to getting it and using all the transfers for my team. But now that FIFA 19 is finally being released and I am getting back into the game, I'm wondering what game is best to download. Should I do this FIFA 18 version or the new one? The reason I am choosing to start out with FIFA 18 is because I want to get back into playing a team, and I have already had a fair bit of experience with the game, so it's kind of a no brainer. The best thing about FIFA is it makes you feel like you're playing a real football match. If you've ever seen it in action on TV and thought "Wow, that's so real", you've got the exact same feeling when you're playing FIFA. When you're managing your own football team, you see every team you play against in real time. You get to choose whether to pass, shoot, play a long ball, or a short pass, and the sheer variety of football can be pretty fun. The best bit is that you can play as any team. Pick a national team and set it up however you want. There's no set version that is known for being the best, they just all work fine, it's just a matter of preference. And there's a lot of things to do in FIFA, making the game not too easy. The game can be played in a single player game mode with a career mode where you can play match after match, or you can go online to play games. There are online tournaments you can play, and you can train with the latest talent to prepare for when you get to play. You can play against the AI of your team, and then, if you're really good, play against real players. You can have 5 or 6 players in a match and even set up your own league
