The present invention relates to a strut suspension for vehicles and more particularly pertains to providing a combination of strength and versatility with a strut suspension for vehicles. The use of strut assemblies is known in the prior art. More specifically, strut assemblies heretofore devised and utilized for the purpose of enhancing the ability of a strut assembly to function are known to consist basically of familiar, expected, and obvious structural configurations, notwithstanding the myriad of designs encompassed by the crowded prior art which has been developed for the fulfillment of countless objectives and requirements. By way of example, U.S. Pat. No. 4,582,068 to Lund discloses a strut suspension. U.S. Pat. No. 4,927,001 to Malijan discloses a damping unit for a car chassis. U.S. Pat. No. 5,094,302 to Hosea et al discloses a strut bar reinforcing member. U.S. Pat. No. 5,160,076 to Thompson et al discloses a strut joint. U.S. Pat. While these devices fulfill their respective, particular objective and requirements, the aforementioned patents do not describe a strut suspension for vehicles for providing a combination of strength and versatility. In this respect, the strut suspension for vehicles according to the present invention substantially departs from the conventional concepts and designs of the prior art, and in doing so provides an apparatus primarily developed for the purpose of providing a combination of strength and versatility. Therefore, it can be appreciated that there exists a continuing need for new and improved strut suspension for vehicles which can be used for providing a combination of strength and versatility. In this regard, the present invention substantially fulfills this need.
