What is this error? The Hash should be an array I thought? edit: def index @places = Place.all render template: 'places/index' end def places @places = Place.all render template: 'places/index' end A: The.all method returns a Hash. The error you're getting is undefined method each for a hash, just like it would tell you that you have a method each for an array. @places.each do |place|... would work in a controller. Two days after his world-record eighth World Cup, Mario Soares has stepped down as technical director of the South Africa Football Association (SAFA) to become CEO of the governing body of Mozambique. Soares has been a notable influence on South African football since his return in 2007 from a three-year playing stint in Portugal, having previously been technical director of the Nigerian FA. In his absence, the SAFA has had turmoil on and off the pitch, including losing its 2018 contract with FIFA that had secured the right to host the World Cup. Soares has also had to deal with the fallout of the revelations of corruption in South African football, including the resignation of president Danny Jordaan and the national team coach. Pieter de Villiers, the current CEO, said: "The growth of our game over the last 10 years has been impressive but we cannot rest on
